Pickets Tie Up Shipping

NEW YORK, N. Y. — (Soundphoto) — First evidence of the nation-wide ship strike that has tied up America's major ports was this picket line in front of the freighter "Cape Race" on New York's North river. The CIO unions are supporting the AFL's seamen, and some dock workers are refusing to cross lines. The issue is refusal of the Wage Stabilization Board to approve an increase in pay won by the seamen in collective bargaining with the ship owners.

VETERAN CLAIMANTS TO BE REVIEWED EVERY 5 WEEKS

Simplified procedures to assist veteran claimants in readjusting themselves to civilian life were announced Wednesday by L. C. Fortier, Maine Unemployment Compensation Commission chairman. The new procedures are effective September 15.

New procedures apply particularly to veterans who have received adjusted compensation allowances for extended periods and will advise such claimants of all suitable work opportunities in their communities, Fortier said.

A general review of claimants who have received readjustment allowances for five or more weeks revealed that many of these veterans had made no contact with the United States Employment Service, or with prospective employers, since filing original claim.

Beginning September 15, according to Fortier, veteran claimants who have received ten or more consecutive readjustment payments will be referred by the claims division to the employment service for interview or counseling. This referral will be made during the week in which the veteran claimant reaches his tenth week of compensable filing, and every five weeks thereafter. Approximately 2100 veterans are in this classification.

Veteran claimants receiving readjustment allowances for 20 weeks or more will be required to file a written report every third calendar week over their signatures. This report to be made when their claim is filed for the twentieth compensable week.

These reports, Fortier said, will be used by the benefit division in determining claimants' eligibility for continued readjustment allowances, in accordance with policies set forth in decisions released recently by the Veterans' Administration.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Buck was employed by E. L. Tebbets Spool Co., Locke Mills.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Buck was a graduate of Woodstock High and of Wentworth Institute, Boston.

MANY CHILDREN DIE BY AUTO ACCIDENTS IN AUTUMN MONTHS

"Unless an added emphasis is placed on traffic safety education we have every right to expect that at least 2000 school age youngsters will lose their lives due to traffic accidents during the next year," declares Harold R. Danford, educational director of the National Conservation Bureau, accident prevention division of the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives.

With schools throughout the country reopening at this season of the year, Mr. Danford warns that nearly one out of three accidental deaths of school-age children result from motor vehicle accidents. Making a study of accidents occurring in Madison, Wisconsin, school children are exemplary for the nation. Mr. Danford says October is generally the worst month for motor vehicle accidents to youngsters. He says September is also bad, but cannot be considered as a full month because many schools do not open until almost half the month is gone.

"This coming year," Mr. Danford says, "will be a more hazardous one than any of the past four or five, due to the return of many more vehicles to the streets and highways, resumption of lower speeds and rundown condition of many of the vehicles. A large proportion of these child auto deaths are directly traceable to faulty, insufficient, or even a total lack of child training in the art of recognizing and avoiding traffic hazards."

During the past 12 months the National Conservation Bureau has given instruction to approximately 2000 teachers and administrators in school safety education. This instruction has been carried on in teachers' training institutes which were conducted in states throughout the nation. Modern methods of teaching safety have been explained and teachers have been instructed in the best means of putting across the safety lesson to the child.

Gould To Open With Skowhegan Saturday

Gould Academy, with only ten days to prepare, is meeting what looks to be a tartar in Skowhegan High. The Indians proved a fine team against Cony High last Saturday and that game gives them a distinct advantage over the Academy eleven.

Coach Scott and his assistants, Roderick and Emery, greeted a squad of about 50 here last week among them only three of last year's regulars. These men are Captain Walker at R. 3; Jerry Davis at P. 3; and Bob Croteau at R. 1. Other letter men who have seen considerable service are Parsons, Day, Cram, Giles, Patrick, and Hawley.

There seems to be plenty of power in the backfield but the line is very uncertain at present. The team looks to be another Scott product that will develop into a winning aggregation before the seasons end.

Not many positions are definitely filled as yet for the opening game. There seems little to choose between Allen, Cram, Young, and Parsons at the end positions. Any two may start.

In the tackle positions it seems a battle between Wood and Patrick on the right side of the line with Day or Paul Wright being chosen for the left tackle position. Powers, another new man, may be in there too. The guard positions are definitely decided in Captain Walker and Giles. Terry, a newcomer, should see plenty of service here also, while Don Bennett and Adams too, are showing well. Dave Bennett or Libby will get the nod for the pivot positions, followed by Hunsnewell who is improving. At Q. Frank and most likely start with Pierce and Cole rotating Blackader and Bob Croteau at the halves and Davis, F. B. should make a fine running set of backs with at least two of them able to kick and pass. Another fine back is Don Hall who is understudying Davis but may be shifted to a starting I. B. post. Other backfield candidates who should see some action are McElvinn, P. Croteau, Hawley, Melville and Bumpus.

The boys rounding out the 1945 football squad are C. O'Brien, Brown, Moore, Emery, Philbrick, Hamilton, McAllister, Modelos, Shuchfield, Perreault, Little, Joy, Stedman, Hones, Marshall, Rolfe, Klatn, Boutot and O. Wight.

BENJAMIN-GALLAGHER

At a wedding ceremony in Gray Memorial Methodist Church at Carleton recently, Miss Thelma Gallagher became the bride of Lt. Cmdr. Spurgeon Benjamin of Brigetown, N. J. The bride is the daughter of J. Frank Benjamin of Houlton. The Rev. Philip H. Lush, minister of Gray Memorial Church performed the service.

Marie Gallagher was maid of honor and Sharon Gallagher, niece of the bride was flower girl. The best man was the groom's brother George Benjamin and ushers were brothers of the bride, Erwin and Burnell Gallagher.

The bride wore a gown of white lace and not with lace yoke, fitted lace bodice and long pointed sleeves. The skirt was of not with hoop and full train. She wore a Juliet cap and finger-tip veil of illusion. She was given in marriage by her father.

For her going away dress Mrs. Benjamin wore a dove gray wool suit and black accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Benjamin attended Carleton schools, was graduated from Farmington State Teachers College and did most graduate work at the University of Maine. She taught at Maine Central Institute, Bethel, at South Academics, Bethel and at Northeast Harbor.

The groom attended the schools of his home town, graduated from University of Maine, and for four years and a half was in the Navy. Before entering the service he was with the New Jersey Department of Agriculture at Bridgeton.

BANANAS AND ORANGES STILL UNDER OPA CONTROL

The Office of Price Administration has discontinued issuing Community Ceiling Price lists for fresh fruits and vegetables because bananas and oranges are the only fresh fruits remaining under control. Charles Buckley, Maine OPA Food Price Specialist, announced today.

Buckley said each retailer will determine his own ceiling prices on bananas by adding the permitted mark up to his cost price, but those individual retail ceilings may not exceed the following maximum ceiling prices per dozen for California oranges sold at retail anywhere in Maine: 150 count, $5.45; 175 count, $5.00; 200 count, $4.65; 225 count, $4.30; 250 count, $3.95. The maximum price for oranges sold by the pound is 16 cents per pound.

Buckley explained that bananas will continue to be priced on a Community Ceiling Price basis, and that retailers will be notified of ceiling price changes through monthly trade releases.

HAVE WE STRENGTH OF CHARACTER

"The government, contrary to popular conception, has nothing to fear except the power to tax the credit based thereon," said J. Hunter, President of the U. S. California, recently. "Thus a thrifty saver of the nation accepted the obligations of government at face value—ever a premium, but it is my opinion unless an earnest attempt is made to balance the budget by cutting down expenses rather than by taking a long step to reduce debt by regular amortization, the fear of insolvency will come to the people as a thief in the night and the wreckage will be left with none escaping. Neither businessmen, Senators, nor the executive branches of government provide food, clothing, or a decent home for the masses, except by slave labor with its economic and spiritual ills."

"Is there strength of character enough in the supposedly free enterprising people to draw in belts and produce? Or will they look to their Congressmen, Senators to do the impossible?"

"The government will spend $10,000,000 in this, a year, when employment is a time high. What would happen if the future depression year comes a drop and at the same time the pressure for more and governmental pump - pedal turned on at white heat? Not his history has this nation produced potentially ruinous course. That fact, unbecomingly, may be, constitutes the greatest problem facing the country."

Household Hints

A nutpick is handy to turn under edges as one sews.

When painting, wear an old sock over your shoe to wipe up drips on the floor without stooping.

Use lukewarm water and borax to wash out your refrigerator. It will keep it sweet and clean.

To prevent milk from boiling over while being heated, rub the rim of the saucepan with butter.

The lint from white clothes is apt to cling to the clothes of succeeding tubfuls, and shows badly on dark pieces. Pull a wire strainer, about 1/2 inches in diameter, through the water in the machine and rinsing tubs and you'll be surprised at the amount of lint you get.

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane is called upon by Sheriff Sam Flick to track down a gang of train robbers. The sheriff tells Jim that he believes the gang is led by a girl, daughter of Pio Alvaro, a former rancher. Jim starts to trail the robber band from the point in the desert of San Loreto county where the hold-up took place. His horse is bitten by a rattlesnake and Jim has to shoot him. Jim struggles through the sand, until, overcome by thirst, he collapses. Four horsemen led by a girl rescue him. From their conversation it is plain that they are Spaniards or Mexicans. Jim awakens three days later in a comfortable bed. When he calls for water a tall man responds.

CHAPTER III

Doane saw a tall, languid man enter. He was dressed in a cheap, dark suit that still, somehow, gave him a dapper, suave appearance. He smoked a cigarette, lazily, his eyes squinting against the rising curls of smoke. Even so, they were the first thing Doane noticed about him... those odd, gray-green eyes, and the supple ease of the man's every gesture. The face was pallid.

"Well, my friend," said the languid one, with the accented inflection which the Spanish mother-tongue gives to later acquired English. "It is still more water? I think we pour 'most one well full into you already. But it is still more, yes?"

Doane fell back on his pillow. A great, sobbing sigh escaped his lips. "Thank God!" he muttered. When the languid fellow stood beside his bed, questioning Doane with his eyes, he found him that swiftly in a profound deep slumber. The man finished his cigarette, watching Doane, a half-smile on his lips. He shrugged his flexible shoulders.

"So it is not water after all, my friend? An' what will happen now, I wonder?" he asked aloud. "Eh? I wonder!"

Doane slept deeply, in a dreamless peace, for nearly twenty hours. During this time an elderly woman replaced the man's watch and care of him. She sponged Doane's body; she placed damp cloths against his forehead. He slept on, unknowing. Then he awoke at last, there was a shaft of bright afternoon sunlight peeping through one of the windows of his room.

Perhaps it had been the sound of muffled hoofs in the garden outside that had awakened him. He heard a horse stamp fretfully. Then low voices, coming nearer, waiting in softly through the open window to his ears. The speech was Spanish.

"... And last night before Monte goes to work at the station, the stranger awakes," said a woman's voice. "But when Monte goes into the room, it is different. The man looks at Monte and he mutters, 'Gracias a Dios! That is all. He falls to sleep again that soon. And ever since he sleeps just like a baby. Like a child, senorita, with a smile on his lips. To see him so, you would not think him the evil man he is.'"

There was a low, musical laugh in answer, and a second voice said: "I think I would like to see this man we rescued now. Perhaps—one can never know!—it would be well to look carefully and remember him."

"While he sleeps so, you mean?" "Yes. No other way, to be sure. While his eyes see nothing in return."

Footsteps along some outer veranda, and the older woman's voice saying: "Monte shaved his face yesterday. You would not know him as the same man. While he sleeps, he looks so—like a gentle child. It is true. He looks like my own Monte when he was young."

The low laugh again, in mild derision. "But it is the heart of a man that counts, senorita. This man's heart is known—it is steel! Monte's is gold. His name is Doane. I know many things about him."

The door opened to Doane's room. The elderly woman glanced in; then walked softly to the bed. She looked down upon a man who breathed deeply, as though in sleep. The man's eyes were closed.

"Past! Come now!"

"No, I would not have recognized him as the same man."

"Just so. He is even handsome, senorita. A caballero."

"If one forgets to think of the heart," said the softer voice. "But well, I am glad to have saved him from the death of thirst. That is a horrible way to die."

A door slammed. "Monte is come," said the older woman as she glided softly from the room. "And he is hungry like the wolf."

Doane heard the door closely noiselessly, and he realized with a start of satisfaction that the younger girl had tarried behind, the girl with the soft voice. His eyes were glued shut, but his straining ears told him she had come to his bedside, that she was standing there looking down at him. Seconds crawled past, like weary centuries, as he fought back a smile and the temptation to open his eyes. At last, softly, she spoke, as though to herself:

"A caballero, yes! You are a handsome one, mio amigo; what friends we might be, if the gods had not made us enemies. You come to put the handcuff on Dolores, yes?" She laughed, and her laugh made Doane think again of a babbling mountain brook; or was it the low tinkling beauty of a vesper bell? She laughed, and she went on, musingly: "You come for that, but the desert put his chain throw on you, yes? And the desert throw you at my feet, half dead. The fortunes of war, my caballero!"

She stood in utter quiet for another second, and then Doane sensed that she was moving toward the door. He opened his eyes and looked at her.

"Buenos dias, senorita."

The girl whirled, and her hand flew to her hip. She smothered a little cry of exasperation as she discovered she had no gun, and she leveled her blazing eyes on the grinning face in the bed.

His grin fled as Doane's eyes met hers. His heart stopped. Her face came clear to him, as though through a rising mist; he thrilled at the firm red lips drawn now in a hard straight line; he almost gasped aloud as he caught his first glance at that dark olive skin, framed in a gay kerchief at the full round throat and crowned above with raven hair as black as midnight.

"These you shall never put on me, mio amigo."

She backed against the door, her eyes like glowing coals of black. She smoldered fire; she fretted at her belt, still pulling at the gun that was not there.

"You would shoot your caballero, your prisoner, senorita?" smiled Doane as he lifted himself on one elbow. "I offer you my gun. You should find it in that holster, on the chair."

"You—you did not sleep. You tricked me!"

"Tricked you, senorita? No man with eyes to see and half a heart could stoop to trick one so beautiful." And immediately he had said it, he knew he had blundered, and he knew also that he meant it.

These were not mere words; they were the echo of something buried deep within him, the echo of a still small voice that told him this was the most beautiful girl in the universe. A ruddy flush crept under the olive skin of her cheeks, and she spoke deliberately:

"Ah! Now you are insulting, senor. I would not believe it, had these ears not heard you say it. My men tell me you are brave, that you fear no man alive. But your own words make you... a fool. The gallant deputy Jim Doane! It is to laugh!"

Doane chuckled. "All's fair in love and war, my friend. I think you spoke of the fortunes of war? Correct. We may have nothing to do with love, but... we are at war, senorita, you and I? You know why I have come?"

"St. I know. I am told you come to catch the train thieves."

The mere hint of a smile crept into her eyes. "And have you captured them, Mr. Deputy Doane?"

"Not yet," replied Doane evenly, holding her eyes. "But I am close to them. If I were strong enough, I might put my hands on one of them, right now."

It was a shot in the dark, but it went home. The girl moved one hand swiftly to her heart, and her eyes wavered as she turned away. In an instant she was back, frowning at him, her eyes averted again.

"Listen to me, my brave one. I know who you are, and all about you. You know me, but not so well. I am not the one you think I am; the thief you have been sent to capture. I swear it. Even if I am, you have not one little tiny piece of evidence against me. And without evidence... what?"

She picked up his handcuffs from the footpost of the bed, and jangled them while she smiled at him. "These you shall never put on me, mio amigo. And if you are not wiser than you are today, you shall never put them on anyone."

Doane grinned.

She flung the bracelets away from her with a final gesture of contempt, regarded him levelly for a moment, then turned and opened the door.

He sent one last jibe at her. "Adios, Senorita Dolores Alvaro!"

She turned, with her hand on the door; she walked swiftly back to him and looked at him once more, with eyes that no longer burned, but that were suddenly soft as black silk. She ran a nervous hand through her jet hair, then dropped it to his arm.

"Please... go back. Go away. Get out of this country when strength comes back. These men you seek... they are merciless... they will stop at nothing... they will kill you. I know! Please..."

She spun on her heel, and fled from the room.

Doane stared after her, opened his mouth to call to her. For a long time he lay there, looking into space. Again he slept, and dreamed of gay senoritas dancing in the sun. Before slumber conquered him, he told himself again that this girl had brought him back from the tortures of hell; that she had picked him up at the very gates of death, knowing well he was her sworn enemy, and that he had come for... her. He owed his life to her. A man's life meant... everything. It was the greatest of his possessions.

He slept.

The hour was approaching sunset. Doane awoke and lay quietly as a man came into the room with a bowl of broth. He was the slim man of the day before.

"The hand of God upon you, senor," he said smoothly. "Broth?"

Doane saw that in age he might be anywhere between thirty-five and forty-five. He noted the peculiar, easy grace of movement, sensing in the stranger, more than seeing it, the teline suppleness of strength that rippled beneath the bright shirt. The man's hands were white and slender, tapering at the fingers as though an artist had moulded them of strong white wax. He put down the bowl of broth and took out a cigarette; he lighted it with all the grace and eloquence of a priest at his ritual. The odd gray-green eyes met Doane's with piercing directness through the spirals of smoke as he dropped his match.

"And who are you?" asked Doane.

The man made a gesture with his white hands. He bowed slightly.

"Me—I am called Garcia... Monte Garcia, senor. An' in return, senor, who are you?"

"You don't know?"

"Me, know?" exclaimed the one called Monte Garcia. "Senor, you flatter me with divine powers. You are, of course, a gentleman of importance. That is obvious! So. But more than that... ah, how could one say?"

"Where am I?"

"Close to Sand Wells. Under my roof, senor, and quite safe."

"Well, come on. Let's have the story."

"Of how you came here, you mean, senor? But yes, of course. Of course, you would wish to hear that first. It is—the beginning."

Garcia made another fine gesture with his hands. Doane tossed in his bed.

"Quit stalling. Let's have it."

"I am employ' in Sand Wells. I have hands with which I work the telegraph instrument, ver' fast and without mistake, like it should be. So the railroad he like me, and I work for them. It is night work. Now, four days ago I walk home in the early morning, and what do I see, senor? None other but you. You stagger, you fall, you fall many times, you cry for water. You do not know how close you are to the town of Sand Wells, so close to houses and water. I bring you here. An' that is all."

Monte Garcia dismissed it all like that, with yet another gesture of his graceful hands. He pulled his knees up under him and took a long, deep pull on his cigarette. He was intimating that the matter was closed and done, once and for all.

"All?" roared Doane, beside himself.

"All, I assure you, senor," came the calm answer. Unless you would include the hospitality of my little house, such as it is. You are welcome, senor. Up to this time I have found you a ver' quiet and courteous guest."

"Bient!" snapped Doane. "I thank you for that. But listen! Deep in my mind I have another story. It differs from yours. Four men and a confederate held up an east bound train out of Sand Wells at dusk. They hit north. I followed. Three mornings later, in the desert, five riders found me, dying of thirst. One was a girl. They brought me here. The girl is called Alvaro—she is the daughter of one senor Miguel Alvaro—and there is a warrant issued for her arrest. The warrant is sworn to by Star La Rue of Sausalito City, and the charge is stock theft from his ranch. This girl saved my life!"

There was no change of expression on Monte's pale face. His eyes looked steadily into Doane's. He said calmly:

"Mistake La Rue is no man. He is what you call a skunk! Or as we Spanish like to say, cabron!—because the he-goat is a more filthy animal."

PAUL WHITEMAN, "The King of Jazz," saluted this column on September 16 when he played Hogy Carmichael's "Star Dust," one of the favorite tunes of thousands of people, including V. Vale. Of course you're familiar with the Whiteman program, "Forever Tops," Monday evenings on ABC. He plays the hit songs of yesterday, and recreates their periods through anecdotes about the fashions and slang of their day. The great Whiteman has helped to launch many of our popular tunes; like his program, he's "Forever Tops." Eugene Baird, who skyrocketed to fame singing with Bing Crosby, was selected from more than 50 girls to sing the top tunes of all time.

The photograph of any person, either living or dead, cannot be used in a motion picture without written permission. So Bess Flowers, character actress, received a full day's pay from Warner Bros. A likeness of her was hung on a wall for a scene in "Cry Wolf," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Errol Flynn. Miss Flowers just stayed home and relaxed and collected her pay.

Danny Kaye has planned a two-month personal appearance tour following completion of his current film, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty"; it'll consist of one-night stands, and 30 performers will go along, including an orchestra. There's a nice story about Kaye. Several children appeared with him on the stage in "Lady in the Dark," and now he not only remembers them, he goes to see them!

They were photographing the Golden Girls ("Secret Life of Walter Mitty") against a studio snow storm, made, of course, of bleached corn flakes. But the corn flakes were full of tiny black objects, which no DDT affected. Come to find out, the black objects were boll weevils, and the theory is that they migrated from the wardrobe of Senator Clegg, making "It's a Joke, Son" on an adjacent stage.

A CBS "Academy Award" rehearsal is a good place to study film stars. Joseph Cotten goes through his script holding his glasses, never wearing them. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. chews gum vigorously, stuffs cotton in his ears if shots are to be fired. Humphrey Bogart draws intricate doodles—and Henry Fonda telephones his wife every hour.

David O. Selznick's "Little Women" cast is pretty well lined up, with Jennifer Jones, Shirley Temple, Bambi Linn and Diana Lynn playing the four girls, Ann Revere as the mother, and the English actor, Philip Friend, making his debut as the love interest.

Frankie Carle knows the habits of the movie companies all too well. When his pretty daughter Marjorie was offered a contract he turned it down unless there was a clause guaranteeing that she'd be used in motion pictures, not just in publicity stunts.

Kay Kyser has signed a new, long-term contract with his sponsors, and beginning October 2 he's cutting his program from one hour to half an hour, at his own suggestion. He's been on that Wednesday night spot on NBC since March 30, 1938.

As a boy Robert Merrill wanted to sing like Bing Crosby. He's done all right singing his own way, what with his Metropolitan Opera engagement and radio work—and he'll sing with Bing if plans for a charity concert to be held in October go through.

ODDS AND ENDS—Kay Kyser introduced the score from Columbia's technicolor production, "The Jolson Story," starring Larry Parks, on his first postwar program... Eight ace Hollywood stunt men have been engaged for a battle royal in RKO's "Katie for Congress," starring Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore. "Okay for Pictures," one reeler, will take us behind the scenes at Warner Bros. presenting glimpses of forthcoming feature films... M.G.M. specialists "bombed Hiroshima" 25 times before they got the right photographic and sound effects for "The Beginning or the End."

When Your Back Hurts—
And Your Strength and Energy is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pain, headache, dizziness, getting up at night, leg pain, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with burning and itching is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won Europe-wide approval than on something that has never been known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are all kidney doctors. Get Doan's today.

KICKOFF TIME

Plenty of action is implied here, but a simple box camera does the trick without need of fast shutter speeds.

IF YOU'RE one of those people whose camera equipment consists of a simple fixed-focus box camera, there's no need to feel that football pictures are beyond your powers. True, cameras with "fast" lenses are an advantage. They permit varied snapshots often impossible to take with less expensive equipment, but it is possible to tell football story without being able to "stop" a forward pass.

Today's picture is based on that shift. The photographer remembered one simple fact: the expectancy of action is nearly as exciting as the action itself. By selecting a moment just before the ball was snapped, and heightening the drama with a well-chosen camera angle, he caught the feeling of tense excitement of the game. And without need to stop motion.

This is split-second timing—but the part of the photographer, the camera. A similar shot might be taken of a substitute crouched beside the coach, getting last minute instructions. One of the best sports pictures of recent years was a photograph of a coach slumped on a bench, dejection written in every line of face and body.

And if you're up in the stands, there are other pictures which spell FOOTBALL unmistakably. Shots of the crowd or nearby friends, complete with feather and chrysanthemum... the band lined up at halftime on the field... the players lined up awaiting the kickoff.

All such shots are within reach by following just the few basic rules for all snapshotting—proper exposure and proper focus. If you're in the stands and shooting at the field, have your camera set for infinity. If you're working at close range, adjust your focus to correspond. And watch the sun—you may wish to increase your exposure as it goes down in late afternoon and shadows fall on the field.

Kathleen Norris Says:

For the Sake of Tomorrow, Stick It Out

Well Syndicate—WNU Features.

"It's good to have a sturdy graying old friend beside you to say 'Look here, kid, we're not 50 yet. If we're some swell years ahead, time's for driving to Mexico next month!'"

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

MARRIAGES are brittle affairs, these days. We older persons, looking on, can see the difficulties of young husbands and wives, and suffer with them. If gallant sturdy little Bets decides that she simply can't stick it any longer we are apt to be sympathetic. Not that we are happy over the young divorcees, not that we approve of that way out—but we can't help being sorry.

"Bets did her best," we say. "She really tried. She was learning to cook, she loved her little apartment and the baby, but Kenneth really was impossible. Crabby and critical, and wanting her to entertain his friends when all she could do was struggle along with the housework—and then, of course, drinking. Oh, yes, he did. She never could depend on him, and when he's drinking, Ken Taylor can be horribly disagreeable."

"It's too bad! They started off so much in love, and all the time he was away Bets wrote him and sent him pictures of the baby and all that. But since he came back—I don't know, everything seems to be going wrong. Ken's family are lovely people, too—everyone admires old Doctor Taylor. But you just can't do anything with the youngsters these days. Bets says she still sees Ken's good points, she doesn't feel resentful or resentful or anything. It's just that they can't make a go of it."

"Divorce Like Atom Bomb." This story is so familiar as to be boring or rather terrifying. These facts and they are facts in every great city and every crossroads village, strike at the very basis of our whole social system. Divorce is actually a very atom bomb, no group can survive it. It splits into fragments families, friendships, little boys and girls, never to be united again. We waste millions on privileges for our children, but we deprive them of rights.

Now, since the success or failure of a marriage lies much more in the hands of the woman than the man, it is to young wives that I address these reminders. However your husband fails you—however serious his faults, it says you to stick it. These are hard times on nerves, perhaps the hardest since history began. You and your husband are both under a strain that your father and mother hardly knew and your grandparents never dreamed.

Your marriage has survived the fever of the greatest war of all time. But it is in that weakened and bewildered condition that follows raging fever. You are beginning to pay the bill for world delirium. Everything is against you, housing, marketing, expenses, taxes. Costs are at their maximum, the necessities of modern living, flowers for the hospital gas for the car, school for the twins, paint for the house, theatre tickets, railway tickets, long-distance telephone charges, baby, hats, taxi fares, having the rugs cleaned and keeping your membership in the club—all these pile up on your desk in the shape of too familiar bills embellished with the little hand pointing to "please remit."

Combine this with trying weather. Taffy's peevishness and Billy-Bill's

"He can be horribly disagreeable."

THIS WILL PASS

Young married people are under unusual stress these days. The unrest naturally following a great war keeps everyone edgy. Little difficulties develop into quarrels. There are plenty of real hardships, too, like the housing shortage and high prices for food and other necessities. Many couples have to live with relatives, always a situation where frictions are easy. Add to these the changing attitude toward family responsibility and the mutual obligations of marriage, and it is easy to see why so many unions are heading toward the break-up.

To those who find the strain hard to bear, and who are looking to divorce as the way out, Miss Norris offers some mature advice. She points out that conditions change, generally for the better. Children grow up and demand less time and worry; husbands settle down and get serious about earning an adequate income. Other troubles pass away with the years.

In middle and old age, says Miss Norris, the wife who endured the hard early years is rewarded. She can enjoy the triumphs of her children, the companionship of her husband, the security of home and a cluster of friends.

asthma, mother's visit, the breakdown of the refrigerator, and you have the makings of more than one hot quarrel, more than one evening of sulphurous silence, more than one rapid decision that it just can't be done.

Troubles Lead to Quarrels. "We don't see anything eye to eye any more," Bets says, shaken and tearful, but dead-end decided. "He'll go to his mother, I'll go to Nevada with Ann. I'm sorry. We both tried. But I couldn't live through that scene at the country club again! If he doesn't respect me, he might respect my own mother. I'm done."

But husbands grow up. Conditions change. Children emerge from irresponsible, burdensome babyhood. Kenneth gets a better job; his self-respect awakens. The twenties aren't all of marriage, nor even the thirties.

There are the forties coming and the fifties. You'll be glad some day that you didn't deprive your small boy and girl of daddy's friendship. You'll be glad to have your man beside you when Billy-Bill goes off to college, when Taffy flutters out to the upstairs balcony of some big comfortable countrytown home and tosses her white bouquet to her bridesmaids. Comradeship counts then. It's good then to have a sturdy, graying old friend beside you to say, "Look here, kid, we're not 50 yet. If we're not some swell years ahead, time's for driving to Mexico next month!"

Weather this bad time if you can change yourself, and thus cause him to change. Plant in your twenties the shady, flower-scented garden that is a happy marriage in middle age.

Bargains in 'Flea Market.' Prices for old clothes and second-hand furniture are dropping in the Paris 'Flea market,' but quotations for bicycles and motorcycles remain firm at 20,000 francs ($252) for the former and 45,000 francs ($565) for the German machine. Chinaware is reduced with coffee service of six cups priced at 6,000 francs ($750) and dinner service 29,000 francs ($362). Vests and trousers are priced at 2,500 francs ($312) and linen suits at 7,500 francs ($937).

Cake at Its Best Depends on Your Care
(See Recipes Below)

Parade of Cakes

If you long to make a cake tender to the touch, feathery in texture, and delicate to the taste, then success is yours if you measure carefully, use good ingredients and bake carefully.

Maybe yours is one of those homes where the weekend does not begin unless there's a luscious cake resting on the cake dish. If so, you'll want variety in addition to goodness, and there will be a different cake here for several week-ends, if you just clip out these recipes and use them as you go along.

This orange cake may be frosted with either orange or chocolate frosting depending upon your taste.

Orange Cake.

(Makes 2 8-inch layers)
2 cups sifted flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening
1 cup sugar

2 eggs
1 1/2 tablespoons grated orange rind
3/4 cup orange juice

Sift flour, measure, then sift again with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy.

Add well-beaten eggs and cream thoroughly, then add orange rind. Add dry ingredients alternately with orange juice, blending thoroughly after each addition. Bake in two layers in greased pans or as cup cakes or loaf cake. Use a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

Orange Butter Frosting: Cream together 1/2 cup butter with about 1 pound of powdered sugar (3 1/2 cups sifted). Add a few grains of salt, 1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange rind and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Add enough liquid to make of spreading consistency.

Chocolate Butter Frosting: Use same ingredients as above omitting orange and lemon juice and rind. Substitute 1/2 cup of cocoa sifted with powdered sugar and enough milk to make of spreading consistency. Flavor with 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla.

Chocolate Spice Cake.

(Makes 1 9-inch tube pan)
2 1/2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon allspice
1 cup shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
4 eggs

3 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 1/2 cups milk

Sift flour, measure, then sift again with baking powder, salt and spices.

Cream shortening, add gradually the sugar and cream together until light and fluffy. Add well-beaten eggs, then chocolate which has been melted and cooled and beat until smooth. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk.

LYNN SAYS:

When You Bake Cakes: Use these tips to make your work more efficient.

Oven should be heated to desired temperature before placing the cake within it. A good work order to follow is to lay out your utensils and ingredients, then light the oven, and then mix your cake. In this way you don't have to stop during mixing to light the oven.

The cake is done when it is lightly browned, and when it springs back lightly as touched. It may show very slight shrinkage from the edges of the pan.

stirring only long enough after each addition to make the mixture smooth. Pour into a greased tube pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until done, about 1 hour.

When cool, spread with chocolate or mocha icing.

If you like fruit in your cake, I'd suggest you try a Prune Cake which will keep nicely moist for at least a week. Dress it up with orange frosting, sprinkled with shredded coconut.

Prune Velvet Cake.

(Makes 3 8-inch layers)

1 1/2 cups drained, unsweetened, cooked prunes
1 cup shortening
2 cups granulated sugar
4 eggs, separated
3 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt

2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sour cream or buttermilk
2 teaspoons vanilla

Measure prunes, then cut into small pieces. Cream together shortening with sugar and cream until fluffy. Add whole eggs, one at a time and beat until mixture is fluffy.

Add sifted dry ingredients with sour cream, alternately, beating until smooth after each addition. Add prunes and vanilla last and mix lightly. Pour batter into three greased or oiled layer pans and bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Frost when cool.

Maraschino Cherry Cake.

(Makes 8 by 12-inch loaf)

1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon lemon flavoring
1/2 cup liquid drained from maraschino cherries or 1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup finely chopped maraschino cherries

3 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 egg whites

Cream together shortening and sugar. Add flavoring and chopped cherries. Add flour alternately with liquid or milk, after flour has been sifted three times with baking powder, and salt. Beat until smooth, then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Place in a greased shallow loaf pan and bake 40 to 45 minutes in a moderate (375-degree) oven. Cool and ice with boiled icing.

Sugarless Boiled Icing.
2 eggs whites, unbeaten
1 1/2 cups white corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Pinch of salt

Combine all ingredients except flavor in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and beat with rotary beater for 7 minutes or until frosting stands in peaks. Remove from boiling water, add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread.

This recipe is enough to frost the top and sides of two or three eight or nine-inch layers or an 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake generously. The top may be sprinkled with coconut, flavored with peppermint, or after the cake is iced, melted chocolate may be drizzled over the white icing.

To make chocolate icing from above recipe, fold in 2 to 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, after finishing the beating.

Romantic Pacific Isles Prove Lure to Many Ex-Servicemen

NAMES REMEMBERED

Jungle Is Creeping Back On Historic War Sites

Guadalcanal, Hollandia, Manus, Tarawa, Kwajalein, Iwo Jima, Okinawa—all were but spots on a map of the Pacific (a large-scale chart at that) until American soldiers, sailors and marines battled and bled there on their long march to victory in World War II.

By dint of sheer manpower, many of them became bases hacked out of the wilderness of the jungle. Now, only a year after the war clouds have cleared, many of them are creeping back to their jungle vastness.

Guadalcanal, site of America's first major land stand against the Jap invaders, has slipped back into obscurity. British civil officials once more rule the Solomon Island bastion and far-famed Henderson Field is quiet except for an occasional plane.

Airfield Disappears.

The remorseless jungle is reconquering the big airfield hacked out by the Americans at Buna, New Guinea.

Few signs of conflict remain on battle-scarred Kwajalein. Developed as a major base in closing days of the war, it also served as an advance base for the atomic-bomb tests.

At Tarawa, one of the costliest battlefields of the Pacific, a small navy garrison maintains the air base, but it may be decommissioned soon.

The name, Leyte, where Gen. Douglas MacArthur kept his pledge to return to the Philippines, is kept alive by the navy, which maintains a major base there. The bay teems with activity, an airfield, air depot, hospital, radio station and naval repair yards being located there.

Manila Is Shambles.

Manila, most dramatic battlefield of the war, still is in shabby ruins. Army trucks and jeeps wind through the streets, past heaps of rubble cleared from the thoroughfares and gaunt frames of once-beautiful buildings. Tourists gaze in awe at the maze of rubble in the Walled City, historic battlesite.

Waves lap the wrecked and rusting landing craft which litter the shoreline at Iwo Jima, a volcanic stepping stone in the march to Tokyo. The American flag still flutters from Mount Surabachi, for a small garrison maintains a relatively unimportant air base on Iwo.

In less than two years, Guam has become the most powerful navy base in the distant Pacific. Of all the Mid-Pacific bases it alone has taken on an air of permanency. Okinawa, at Japan's southern threshold, still lives in much of the misery that war left. Army air forces and navy bases are maintained on the island. Naha, capital city, is a wilderness of destruction, and sunken ships stud Buckner bay.

Kahoolawe Ranks Most Bombarded Island In Pacific

Ask any veteran of the Pacific warfare which bastion was the "most shot at island" during World War II and he'll probably answer Saipan, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, Tarawa or one of the other Japanese strongholds.

But that dubious distinction belongs to the small, desolate, insignificant, war-torn, uninhabited island of Kahoolawe in the Hawaiian chain. Former smugglers' haven, the island, only eight miles by five and of rugged terrain, has been reduced to a mass of rubble by countless shells and bombs.

The explanation is that naval and marine forces used Kahoolawe, uninhabited and commercially worthless, as a testing ground for theories of naval gunfire support of landing forces.

More than 800 ships, ranging from small amphibious craft to battle-wagons, poured thousands upon thousands of rounds into Kahoolawe's barren sides. The tiny island took a greater shelling than either Iwo Jima or Okinawa, where naval gunfire reached its peak in the Pacific.

10,000 Navy Men Take Discharges At Island Bases

Long heralded in song and film as the land of beauty and romance, glamour and adventure, the myriad islands of the Pacific left a lasting imprint on thousands of American servicemen whose war duties gave them their first glimpse of the palm-fringed and coral-studded atolls.

The romantic lure of these Pacific isles already has drawn nearly 10,000 discharged American navy men, who have decided not to go home after the war's end.

The navy department reports that 9,372 navy men who were stationed on Pacific islands during the war have received special authority to be demobilized at their stations instead of returning to the United States for discharge.

All were required to have jobs or some other source of income before this permission was granted. Most of the voluntary ex-patriates have obtained civil service employment in the military government, the navy announces. Others have jobs in private enterprises, mainly in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Some sailors have "gone native"—marrying native girls and deciding to make their permanent homes on one of the islands.

A few were reported interested in starting commercial enterprises which import consumer durable goods from the United States. Private business has been impeded, however, because of the relative scarcity of radios, automobiles, refrigerators and other durable goods.

Look for Retreat.

Occasionally the navy department receives a wistful letter from a former sailor or marine, discouraged by peacetime conditions at home, asking if there is a little island in the Pacific he can buy inexpensively for a retreat "to get away from it all."

As during the war, Americans find a warm reception on most of the islands of the Pacific. Almost without exception the natives regarded the United States as their defender and liberator, and now they wait hopefully for the return of the men they saw during the war.

The Americans brought a taste of modernity and of big enterprise to the peoples of the island groups. The natives saw a picture of the United States as a place of vast wealth and immense physical resources. The huge quantities of materials which moved through these places made an indelible impression on the people.

Revelation of United States standards of comfort, of transportation, of eating and of public health has given the natives an incentive to move forward. Americans were friendly, and generally there was immediate response to this offer of friendship.

High School Graduates Flock to Army

NEW YORK.—One of every four graduates from high school this year either has joined the army or has indicated his intention of doing so, it is disclosed in an army enlistment survey. The survey was taken in connection with the campaign to secure a "million enlistments."

Army life still holds an element of adventure for youth, the survey indicates, as about 22 per cent of the approximate 900,000 volunteers are in the 17 to 18-year-old bracket.

Former army men constituted 13 per cent of the total, although that category is diminishing.

Largest single group, about 65 per cent, represent men already in the army who signed up for extended service.

Many responding to the survey reported that they considered the army a "better deal" than a civilian's job, especially since the pay has been increased materially.

Others expressed a desire to join the army because it provides a "chance to learn." In addition to army training, soldiers joining the regular army at this time are eligible to secure a college education under the extended G. I. Bill of Rights.

With the goal of a million enlistments in sight, the army now is planning a new approach—a search for quality. Maj. Gen. Harold N. Gilbert, assistant to the adjutant general for military personnel procurement, said the army soon would be putting quality above all; that the service wanted men who could absorb the technical training necessary for soldiers who must deal with electronics, chemistry, communications, intelligence, languages, civil administration, high speed aviation and the other factors of a scientific army in the atomic age.

Year-Old Boy Carries Pal To Save Foot

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Six-year-old Andy Tays, who acted like a man in an emergency, is happy to learn that doctors have saved the left foot of a five-year-old playmate after Andy carried him in his arms for quarter of a mile when a freight car crushed the lad's foot.

Hunting pigeons with slingshots did not prove adventuresome enough for Andy's playmate, John Joseph Blalinger Jr., so he decided to ride a few blocks on a slow-moving train. Missing his jump for a freight car ladder, he fell under the wheels, and his foot was crushed.

A white-faced Andy struggled home, carrying his injured playmate. Physicians, who saved all except a few of the boy's toes, credited Andy's prompt action with preventing more severe shock and loss of blood.

MRS. KILBORN WRITES OF "WINDJAMMER" CRUISE

Without denying that life has contained sufficient adventure and that ours has been far from a hum drum existence generally these recent years, it may be there are others who are interested in seeking out or learning of new experiences, fresh thrills, if you like. One such means of adventuring is the Vagabond Cruise, so called, offered at Camden Maine. During the summer months the fleet of schooners and yachts sail out of Camden harbor Monday mornings for the week cruising among the islands and harbors of the Maine coast.

This is not a luxurious trip and one must have sufficient hardihood and self reliance to find it advisable. Indeed, all travel demands a certain amount of adjustability.

The Windjammers are sturdy crafts of the old school, captained by men of experience. On the 18 foot schooners a rough sea is not too disturbing. If a breeze is non-existent there is a motor in the bow to use. Wind is the natural, the only really free agent of propulsion and a good breeze in the sails is always hoped for.

The voyager must have a liking for the sea to enjoy such a trip to the utmost. Of course weather is important and one can be lucky or unlucky in that respect. No one can do anything about the weather. In one week the writer saw all kinds—heavy Easterly lead winds then a calm requiring gasoline, some dense fog and a day when the fresh breeze filled the sails and the schooner raced with the wind.

The first night our windjammer was anchored in Duck's Harbor which is tucked away on our side of Cape Rosier in the upper part of Penobscot Bay. Next day we sailed through Eggemoosin Reach past Little Deer Isle, then the Deer Isle Thoroughfare. After reaching Blackhill Bay the second night anchor was dropped in Toms Harbor by the village of McKim's on the southern tip of Mount Desert Island. The third day our course was West among seemingly numberless islands until that night found us in the harbor of Belfast. Next morning we sailed down the coast past lovely Islesboro with its attractive summer homes of the favored from afar. The fourth night we were in the snug little deep water harbor of Rockport where on the shore above us were the ideal cottages of the Artist Colony. The last day we cruised off North Haven unfortunately in rain or heavy mist. To end on Saturday afternoon back in Camden.

One of the charms of the Maine coast is its completely wooded outline, principally with sturdy fir trees, once aptly called the Land of the Potted Firs.

There are romance and history along these lovely shores, the story of early settlement and the struggles of various colonizing European races. Fastime itself is called the Battleground of Four Nations, French, Dutch, British and Americans.

It would seem appropriate for the embarkment on this Vagabond Cruise to take place along Richard Henry Dana's Two Years before the Mast of beloved memory of our other and more youthful days. One goes to sleep on board gently rocked by the side wise motion of the schooner at anchor. And after landing at the shore there is still carried for several days that gentle suggestion of lullaby, the whisper of the sea and land.

BIBLE QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY THE VOICE OF PROPHECY INTERNATIONAL BIBLE BROADCASTER Question—Who were the Gentiles often mentioned in the Bible?

Answer—The word "Gentiles" simply means the peoples or nations. Israel was God's peculiar people, His chosen nation. (Exodus 19:5; Isaiah 43:20.) The Gentiles were all other nations and peoples.

Q.—Is the atom bomb mentioned in the Scriptures?

A.—No, but the description of events in the "Day of the Lord" is suggestive. "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Peter 3:10.

Q.—If I always love my neighbor and am honest, will I not get to heaven?

A.—Listen to this: "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Matthew 22: 37-39. A good many people are apt to overlook the first and great commandment. Our duty is first to God—then to man.

Q.—Are all prayers heard?

A.—All sincere prayers are heard by God, but not all are answered in exactly the way we wish or expect. God sometimes says, No. Sometimes He gives what we ask; sometimes He gives us something better. Our Saviour said: "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Luke 18:1. Also in Matthew 7:7-11: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that knocketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask Him?" Read also Psalm 65:2.

Every Typewriter Is Needed

If you have a typewriter which is not in use, you can help someone a lot by selling the machine to us or to the needy party NOW.

We will pay all your machine is worth—have it reconditioned and sell it immediately at a fair price, guaranteed to give good service.

With the slow delivery of new typewriters, both standard and portable models, there is a great demand for useable machines for use in student practice and business.

Why not sell your typewriter today if you do not really need it?

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. The heathen sing; a reading, given by then raged, the kingdoms were moved; he uttereth his voice, the earth melted. Be still and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth" (Psalms 46: 1, 6, 10.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following selections from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "He uttereth His voice, the earth melted. This scripture indicates that all matter will disappear before the supremacy of Spirit. In the infinitude of Mind, matter must be unknown" (pages 37: 26 and 280: 1)
